FURTHER INFORMATION

"The schoolboy humour, the intelligent banter, the taste for the absurd, the not very well controlled flights of fancy, cynical words used like formulas: the authors [Ricardo Trogi, Patrice Robitaille and Jean-Philippe Pearson] are like their film Québec-Montréal. Like their films, in fact, because this ironic tone, both heavy and light, was already present in Trogi's short films, with the hyper-serious sexual maniac in C'est arrivé près de chez nous. [...] Our laughter is embarrassed, the film's ideas brilliantly illustrated and the actors well directed".
