DESCRIPTION
This is a documentary about the men of a particular generation living in the St-Henri area who remember the severity and cruelty of religion at school, the significance of prayer in the classroom and the competency and personality of their former professors. Narrating is Yvon Deschamps, who shares his impressions on this topic. Using archival photographs and interviews, the following is discussed: military security in North America and the consequences of war, the enlistment of youth into the police force and the subsequent replacing of physical training for education at school.
