DESCRIPTION
A video that pays homage to the Hungarian revolution of 1956. Kantor describes being dragged to a Paris barbershop by his father 10 years later. On the way, he prays that Paris will be destroyed so that he doesn't have to get his hair cut. But nothing can be done. When he gets up from the barber's chair, the end of the world has not come and the sky remains hopelessly blue.

SHOOTING FORMAT
MiniDV

FURTHER INFORMATION

"This video song immortalizes an event that happened when I was 16. It's the spirit of my youth that drives me for new revolutionary adventures. Long Live the Spirit of Sweet 16 Rebellion!" - Istvan Kantor
