DESCRIPTION
Inflamed matches with such a present, but ephemeral life fall down on the floor until their complete extinction. As the landscape drawn by the flames of small, fragile matches, shiny memories of the past water the body, where the physical earth and the psychic world get entangled. The light is absorbed in the dark of the unconscious filled of forgotten things. Above the image of a mysteriously animated landscape, two voices flow. A voice pronounces sentence of forgetting while the other follows it with those of memory. The voice of the artist accompanied by the one of the psychologist, two monologues intersect, echo, fade and follow each other.
