SERIE

Museum Stills

DESCRIPTION

The series of Stills made in museums exist in the space at either end of the behavioral spectrum. While in these strange constructs which "protect" and "exhibit" art, we must observe certain behavioral rules. Museum Stills explore both extremes of these behaviors, from the over-identification and even psychological breakdown that can occur in front of works of art to the practiced performance of indifference in the interstitial stairways and corners of these often-hulking institutions.

FURTHER INFORMATION

"The last two stills present distinctively banal museum experiences. Here we witness the polar opposite of excessive identification: a disengaged disinterestedness. That is, museumgoers utilize the space apart from direct engagement with art. Beyond the museum's designation as a site of cultural inscription and moral instruction, it is a heterotopic public space often deployed as a time-out from the frantic pace of the city. In 4 Chairs, visitors relax in upholstered chairs poised in a compartmentalized, cruciform shape. The individuals in this alienated arrangement relate neither to each other, nor to the art. Are they distracted, dreaming, making plans, or just spacing out? Whatever their thoughts, these individuals are distinctly "alone" despite being together in public."
